The Corris Railway Society

THE “FALCON” PROJECT.

BUILDING A REPLICA OF AN ORIGINAL CORRIS RAILWAY STEAM ENGINE FOR THE 21st CENTURY

BACKGROUND

The Corris Railway was originally opened in 1859 as a horse and gravity worked line taking slate and other products between the Dulas Valley and the navigable waters of the River Dovey. However in 1878 the residents of the Valley began to get used to the sound of steam whistles as three small saddle tank locomotives, built by Hughes Locomotive and Tramway Engine Works Ltd of the Falcon Works in Loughborough, took over freight train workings with steam passenger trains following on in 1883.

The “Falcons” were delivered with an 0-4-0 wheel arrangement but this proved to make for a bouncy ride on the sharp curves of the Corris and they were fairly soon converted to 0-4-2's by the addition of a small set of trailing wheels under the cabs. Unusually for narrow gauge engines that hauled passenger services they never carried names but for the next forty years Corris numbers 1, 2 and 3 gave excellent service as the CR became one of the most enterprising and successful small railways in Britain.

However by the First World War age was beginning to tell. Number 1 was set aside in 1913 and Number 2 operating irregularly in the 1920's but being finally set aside in 1928 with parts from the pair going to keep number 3 in action.

It was a tribute to the original design that when thoughts turned to a new engine it was hoped to order “another one” but Hughes had become part of Brush Engineering who no longer made steam engines and so Number 4 was another 0-4-2 saddle tank but of a different design and from Kerr Stuart of Stoke on Trent.

In 1930 the Corris was purchased by the Great Western Railway and a gentle decline in traffic continued. Passenger services ended almost immediately and eventually the line was served by a thrice-weekly goods train. This ran on into British Railways first year of 1948 but in August flooding eroded the banks of the Dyfi to the point where the line was in danger of being washed away and the services ended abruptly. The last services were worked by number 3 as 4's firebox was worn out.

Numbers 3 and 4 were sheeted over to protect them and spent two years in the yard at Machynlleth from which all logic suggested they should go to the scrapyards. However they were purchased by the Talylyn Railway and delivered in 1951 (for the combined sum of £50) to begin a new life which has seen them working on the TR for over half-a-century. By one of those quirks of locomotive history Corris Railway 3 and 4 became Great Western 3 and 4 and are now Talylyn 3 and 4 although now number 3 is named “Sir Haydn” and 4 “Edward Thomas”. Falcon number 3 is still working for a living at the age of 130 in a tribute to the quality of the original design.

THE “FALCON” APPEAL

One of the difficulties which the current Corris Railway has faced since it began to bring the line back to life is its track gauge. 2 feet and 3 inches is unusual and now only shared with our Talylyn neighbours. So when it comes to locomotives and rolling stock we are limited in what we can use or hire in. We have important historical vehicles and have built a new carriage shed at a cost of over £120,000 to keep them under cover. We have also spent £100,000 on steam locomotive number 7 which joined the ongoing story of the Corris in 2005.

Number 7 is an updated replica of the original number 4 and has proved an excellent machine. However as the line expands in length and number of visitors more steam power will be needed, especially as number 7 will fall due for the statutory “ten year” overhaul in 2014/5.

And so the Corris Railway is going to build another “Falcon” after a modest gap of a century and a quarter. Based on experience with number 7 we will be looking to raise £100,000 plus. For a small Society such as ourselves this will be another major effort and we would very much appreciate your help. One off donations, small or large, will be most gratefully received, as will be the steady cash flow represented by standing order payments. Both can be helped further by the Gift Aid provisions if you are a UK tax payer. If we can get 400 subscribers paying £5 a month by Standing Order (that's less than 2 pints of beer) and reclaim the Gift Aid we are looking at £25,000 per annum.
